ABSTRACT

This revision of the 1974 union list, sponsored by the Texas Information Exchange, identifies the holdings of microforms in Texas libraries. Included are microform editions of composite sets and of separately published works in which the collecting has been done by the microform publisher. It also includes manuscript collections which, when filmed, occupy over ten microfilm reels. An alphabetical list of participating Texas libraries and a directory of library services arranged by National Union Catalog Symbol is provided. Individual newspaper titles and single monographs or sets, printed editions of which can be found in standard bibliographies such as L.C. catalogs, are excluded. (Author/AP)

INTRODUCTION

This revision of the 1974 Union List of Major Microform Sets in Texas Libraries, again sponsored by the Texas Information Exchange, is a continuing effort to identify holdings of microforms in Texas libraries. As in the earlier edition, the guidelines for inclusion of microform sets are similar to those used by the Center for Research Libraries in the "Microform and Reprint Collections" section of its 1973 Handbook. Thus, it includes microform editions of composite sets and of separately published works in which the collecting has been done by the microform publisher, e.g., English and American Plays of the 19th Century. This union list also includes large manuscript collections which, when filmed, occupy over ten microfilm reels.

Excluded are individual newspaper titles and single monographs or sets, printed editions of which can be found in standard bibliographies such as the L.C. catalogs. The editor assumes complete responsibility for inclusion or exclusion. Occasional exceptions to the guidelines have been made. (For example, items filmed by or for Texas libraries are included if their availability may not be generally known.)

The main entry used is that given in the Guide to Microforms in Print, 1975 (Washington, Microcard Editions). If a title is not included in that guide, the form of entry used by the reporting library has been followed. Cross references have been used liberally in order to overcome the shortcomings of some of the entries.

Many publishers supply a checklist or guide to their collections of microforms; such guides are not usually mentioned in this union list. However, bibliographies on which collections are based are noted, as are other helpful guides and indexes. No guide is listed for each of the publications of the National Archives; the List of National Archives Microfilm Publications, 1974 (Washington, National Archives and Records Service, GS4.2:M58/974) provides a useful starting point for the identification and use of National Archives publications.

Notes concerning coverage and indexing are given when the information was readily available. I gratefully acknowledge the quantity of such information which I found in similar lists: the Union List of Microform Sets in O.C.U.L. Libraries (Ontario Council of University Librarians, 1973); A Union List of Selected Microforms in Libraries in the New York Metropolitan Area (METRO, 1972?); the Union List of Major Collections in Microform in North Texas Libraries (Dallas Public Library, 1972); and the Guide to Selected Microforms Held by the Library of The University of Texas at Austin (by Hugh G. Black, M.L.S. report, 1969).

Of course, thanks are again due to all the libraries whose staffs so willingly made reports of holdings and then so cheerfully answered numerous questions. Without the assistance of many cooperative librarians no compilation such as this could be made. Special thanks go to the members of the Board of the Texas Information Exchange for their encouragement and to The General Libraries of The University of Texas at Austin who generously agreed to handle the printing and distribution of the final compilation.

Looking forward to the possibility of another revision, please send notes and problems as well as suggestions for improvement to the editor.

-U.S. National Archives and Records Service. (Microform Publications)

A collection of some of the most significant National Archives records are available at the Archives Branch. "The microfilmed records contain basic documentation for the study of history, economics, public administration, political science, law, ethnology, genealogy, and other subjects. Included are records of U.S. diplomatic missions, large collections of materials relating to the Revolutionary and Civil Wars, German records captured at the end of World War II, territorial papers, census returns and records of Indian agencies and U.S. district courts." Prologue II (Fall 1970) 138-140. Films are available for use on site and on interlibrary loan. A detailed list of the materials available at the Regional Archives is available from the Center. Presently there are over 8000 rolls available . Each year some 4000 rolls will be added to the collection. Request the list from: Chief, Archives Branch, Federal Archives and Records Center, P.O. Box 6216, Fort Worth, Texas 76115.
